A Tiny Paper About Founders

Jane Researcher (jane@example.edu)

Abstract

This paper studies founder persistence. We find grit predicts outcomes.

Introduction

Entrepreneurship research has long debated what predicts success.

We build on prior work to investigate founder-level signals.

Method

We surveyed 200 founders and coded their verbal responses.

Results

Persistence scores correlated r=0.42 with five-year survival.

Discussion

Findings suggest investors should weight founder grit highly.
